

Experience report from the training - Petra Lomp

The first day started with the news that Pieter's plane was delayed due to a defect, ultimately 7 hours. After the rental boats were ready, however, our small EU group was kindly taken under the wing of the coaches from Bermuda and the Bahamas, so that they could take their first plunge into the turquoise water. The wind always picks up around noon, but also likes to go to sleep in the afternoon. But the outlook for the first two days of the regatta also promises rather light winds according to our German-speaking supervisor Robert - and he is an expert. Pieter also arrived safely and found a real team yesterday. Today the super organised survey went off without a hitch. Thanks to the lack of wind in the afternoon, the 4 were already looking forward to the water park at Atlantis. But then the rain came, tropical as you would imagine, plus thunderstorms! Third day of training over. Robert sent us the pictures of the waterspout. Hopefully the sun will shine again tomorrow for the opening.

Petra Lomp (@Jasper Winter GER 1610)

Photos: © Water tower Peter Maury; Optis Petra Lomp

